DEFINITION OF PCR TEST:

PCR = Polymerase Chain Reaction

- Why is the test used?

Answer: PCR tests look for pieces of SARS-CoV-2, the virus that causes COVID-19, in the nose, throat, or other areas in the respiratory tract to determine if the person has an active infection

- How is the test performed?

Answer: In most cases, a nasal or throat swab is taken by a healthcare provider and tested. Sometimes the test can be run while you wait, and sometimes the swab needs to be sent to a lab for testing.

- What does a positive test result mean?

Answer: A positive PCR test means that the person being tested has an active COVID-19 infection.

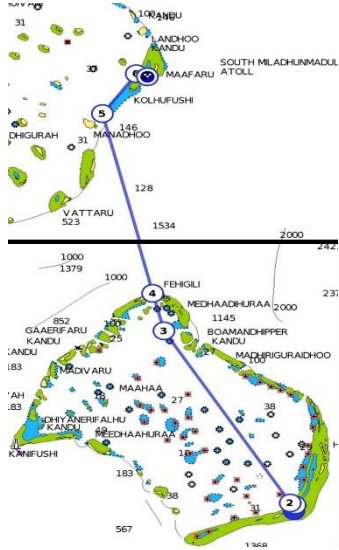

- What does a negative test result mean?

Answer: A negative PCR test means that person was probably not infected at the time their sample was collected. However, it doesn't mean they won't get sick – it only means that they didn't have COVID-19 at the time of testing.
